18. [redacted] in late May or early June 1956, areas patrolled by any given patrol in the 8th Zastava were considerably reduced. This was accomplished by patrols starting two hours later at night than previously (1900 hours instead of 1700 hours) and remaining on duty eight hours instead of six. Formerly patrols guarded the border area in two shifts, one shift patrolling from 1700 hours to 2400 hours, another shift from 2400 hours to 0600 hours. The new system was directed by the Transcaucasian Military District commander. [redacted]
